Dear Member of Parliament,

Trans people in Britain are facing an existential threat, while businesses, employers and service providers are being dragged through the courts for defending their inclusive practices.

We, the undersigned organisations, are writing to ask for your help.

Trans people are already being excluded from every walk of life, and from organisations that want to remain proudly inclusive. Girl Guiding described their move to kick out trans girls as “a decision we would have preferred not to make”, while the Women’s Institute said that ending decades of happy inclusion was done with the “utmost regret and sadness”.

Fighting for inclusion is hard: 86% of respondents to the City of London’s recent Hampstead Heath swimming ponds consultation want to remain trans-inclusive, and yet the Corporation continues to face the prospect of expensive litigation.

They don’t want this. But lawfare against inclusive organisations will continue, whatever the courts decide, with public money and business budgets spent defending against it - unless you act.

Trans people being included in services and spaces for their lived gender is the norm up and down the UK, and service providers & employers want to protect their ability to keep operating in line with their values. This is how the Equality Act has always worked: exclusion is the exception - not the rule.

Anything else risks forcing businesses, charities and public services to police everyone’s gender - with reports suggesting that the EHRC recommends this be done based on looks, putting all women at risk of misogynist abuse. This would be dangerous and unworkable.

We know where this leads: ‘bathroom ban’ policies in Trump-supporting US states have caused untold harm to trans people and to anybody who doesn’t conform to gender stereotypes, without making a single woman safer.

Wherever you stand, and whatever the courts decide while trying to make sense of this situation, it cannot be right that organisations who have been proudly trans-inclusive for years feel forced to change this due to a lack of clarity on how to remain inclusive and costly legal threats. And it cannot be right that trans people are forced to live a life where nowhere feels truly safe.

Will you please write to the Minister for Women and Equalities and the Prime Minister to ask:

- That they work to ensure our equalities law and guidance protects the norm of trans-inclusion. This is how the Equality Act has always worked, and it must be defended.
- That they commit to ensuring that all UK legislation protects the human rights of trans and gender non conforming people.
- That they act to protect everyone's freedom of association, making sure that the many women's and men's groups who wish to remain inclusive are not forced to exclude.
- That they ensure that any equalities guidance is workable in its implementation, and protects organisations from expensive anti-trans lawfare.

Yours sincerely,
